

Your Encouragement

- We all have a story - the one we're living.
- We're the only ones who can tell it because we're the only ones who've lived it. That makes us supremely qualified to tell it.
- That doesn't mean you have to become a speaker or writer to tell it, just open to how God wants to use it to bless others.

Your Empowerment

“God grows us out of and into who He needs us to be to best serve Him,” says Oprah. There's a reason we lived what we lived and survived what we survived. God never wastes our experiences, our tears, or our transformations.

What's your story? We all have one and it's unique to us. I think it's worth remembering that by sharing it, we can tame our own demons, validate our pain, and even redeem the outcomes. If we've lived it we are qualified to share it. For the love of God... we tell our stories and through them our readers and listeners, and those we sit next to, and knee-to-knee with can find healing and grow closer to Jesus. That's living the life God created us for, and we are all invited and qualified to do that!

Good work Ladies!!!
